Author's Notes:
Written in December of 2003.

People warned James about the dangers in the world. He never listened to them. He regrets not listening to a lot of them.

"Don't lose your temper."
"Don't fuck with your bassist's head until he quits the band."
"Don't drink too much."

All those warnings, and not one word about mistletoe. No warning about how a hanging sprig could make you lose your self control and give in to your desires. Maybe if they had, he wouldn't be under it kissing Rob.

Then again, James never paid attention to warnings before, and right now, he didn't see why he should.
